Getting to The Entertainment Hall

Originally designed to provide a recreational space for the workers at White Bay Power Station, the Entertainment Hall at White Bay Power Station was a bustling hub for social activities and gatherings. Today, it stands as a powerful reminder of the workforce's community spirit.

We are thrilled to announce that the Entertainment Hall will open its doors for the very first time to host a curated selection of events during the 25th Biennale of Sydney. While located within the broader White Bay Power Station footprint, it operates as an adjacent, standalone venue.

Entrance to the Entertainment Hall

The doors to the Entertainment Hall are located on Victoria Road. If you are traveling from Robert Street and turning onto Victoria Road, follow the bend around toward the Anzac Bridge overpass. Approximately 50 meters from the intersection crossing, you will see a street sign. Just past this sign on your left-hand side is Gate 5.

Note: This is a separate entry point from the main White Bay Power Station (WBPS) entrance located further down on Robert Street. See the map above.

Safety and Navigation

Most public transport options will drop you off on Robert Street. To reach the Entertainment Hall doors from there, you will need to walk either up or down the hill.

Please stay alert while walking, as the pathway is an active bike path shared with cyclists. If you are walking up from the main Robert Street entrance, please take extra care; the footpath can be uneven in sections. While the Entertainment Hall is technically on the ground level, the surrounding terrain is inclined.

Because cars cannot stop on Victoria Road under any circumstances, we highly recommend getting dropped off on Crescent Street (just off Victoria Road). From there, you can walk a short distance and cross safely at the top of the Victoria Road intersection, avoiding the steep hill.

Navigating on Foot (Robert Street Crossings)

The pedestrian crossing at the top of Robert Street, intersecting with Victoria Road, is the best and safest way to get to the Entertainment Hall.
